

EU-RIKKA! NEW FLORAL BIZ DOUBLES AS INTIMATE EVENT CENTER

Like its namesake, Rikka (meaning "standing flowers" in Japanese) exudes elegance and simplicity. This new business is part florist, specializing in Asian and contemporary arrangements, and part center for private events.

Fitted with a state-of-the-art kitchen and techie bells and whistles - everything from 50-inch plasma televisions to a Gaggenau espresso machine - Rikka blends form and function in an intimate, tailored package.

As owner Jane Sahagian puts it, Rikka is "an oasis that has a very contemporary and metropolitan aura to it".

Sahagian - who balanced an extensive legal career with freelance floral and interior design before embarking on this entrepreneurial endeavor - has created a welcoming yet distinguished florist-meets-private function sanctuary. Lofty ceilings marked by giant windows framing stunning mountain views are offset by comfortable furniture, clean lines, a marble waterfall, silk chandeliers and a decidedly feng shui sense of limited clutter. In tune with the rich, exotic arrangements displayed in niches, the 1,500 square-foot space also incorporates earth-friendly bamboo floors and a geo-thermal heating system.

With the paint barely dry, Sahagian has already lined up an array of sophisticated and community gatherings in coming months - from culinary showcases to corporate Sundance-inspired parties to bat mitzvahs. With a wireless hotspot and pastries in the works, it may also become a local coffee shop-style hangout. And, of course, Rikka will continue to blossom as East meets West in floral arrangements.
